The Seven Last Plagues

SABBATH AFTERNOON

Read for This Week’s Study: Rev. 15:1; Rev. 7:1–3; Rev. 14:9, 10; Rev. 16:1–12; Rev. 17:1; Daniel 5; Rev. 16:16; 2 Thess. 2:9–12.

Memory Text: “‘Who shall not fear You, O Lord, and glorify Your name? For You alone are holy. For all nations shall come and worship before You, for Your judgments have been manifested’” (Revelation 15:4, NKJV).

Revelation 11:18 summarizes events on earth right before the battle of Armageddon: “‘The nations were angry.’” This state of affairs on earth matches Jesus’ description of the last days (Luke 21:25) and is followed by God’s wrath, which are His judgments in the form of the seven last plagues upon the unrepentant (Rev. 15:1).

Revelation 15 opens with the picture of seven angels with seven bowls filled with this divine wrath. But before this outpouring happens, we have a future glimpse of God’s faithful people (Rev. 15:1–4). They are described as victorious “over the beast, over his image and over his mark and over the number of his name” (Rev. 15:2, NKJV), as they stand on something resembling a sea of glass and sing the song of Moses and the Lamb—all images reminiscent of the Hebrews on the shores of the Red Sea, celebrating God’s victory over the Egyptians (Exodus 15).

These victorious saints are the same ones referred to as the 144,000 in Revelation 14:1–5. Having refused the mark of the beast, they are protected from the seven last plagues. Then, at the Second Advent their mortal bodies are transformed and clothed with immortality (1 Cor. 15:51–54), and they will join the resurrected saints when Jesus comes in power and glory (1 Thess. 4:17).

The Meaning of the Seven Last Plagues

People have already made their choice either for God or for Babylon. Before Christ comes, however, the destructive winds of Satan’s fury that have been restrained (Rev. 7:1–3) are unleashed, followed by the seven last plagues.

Read Revelation 15:1 along with Exodus 7–11. How are the Egyptian plagues, considered the backdrop for the seven last plagues, instructive regarding their purpose and meaning?

The seven last plagues are referred to as the “last” plagues because they come at the very end of earth’s history. In contrast, the plagues of the seven trumpets cover the time period that includes the entire Christian age and are restricted in their scope. They are executed while the gospel still is being preached (Rev. 10:8–11:14) and intercession is taking place (Rev. 8:2–5). They are mixed with mercy, and their purpose is to bring the enemies of God’s people to repentance.

On the other hand, the seven last plagues are poured out just prior to the Second Coming. They are poured out upon those who, like Pharaoh, hardened their hearts against God’s redeeming love and would not repent (see Rev. 16:11). Divine wrath is God’s righteous judgment on the choices people have made (see Rom. 1:26–28), and at that time the lost are reaping the consequences of their own choices.

Read Revelation 15:5–8 along with Exodus 40:34, 35 and 1 Kings 8:10, 11. What does the statement that “no man was able to enter the temple” (Rev. 15:8) suggest about the timing of the seven last plagues?

The expression “no one was able to enter into the temple” (Rev. 15:8, NKJV) points to the close of probation (Rev. 22:11). As Christ’s mediatorial ministry in heaven comes to an end, the door of opportunity to repent closes forever. Therefore, the last plagues will not bring anyone to repentance, but only disclose the hardness of the hearts of those who chose to side with Babylon, prompting them to hate God even more (Rev. 16:9, 11).

Look around at the world today, which is going to get only worse. What does the fact that the plagues have been delayed this long teach us about God’s mercy and patience?
The Outpouring of the Last Plagues

With the cessation of Christ’s intercession in the heavenly sanctuary, the destiny of each individual is forever determined. The time has come for those who have spurned the gospel to experience God’s wrath in its fullness.

The seven last plagues mirror the plagues poured out upon Egypt (Exodus 7–11). As the Egyptian plagues affected the Egyptians while the Israelites were spared, so God’s people will be protected during this time of trouble (Ps. 91:3–10; see The Great Controversy, pp. 629, 630). The plagues on Egypt disclosed the hardness of Pharaoh’s heart and showed the Egyptians the inability of their gods to protect them. Similarly, the last plagues increasingly harden the hearts of the worshipers of the sea beast and reveal the powerlessness of Babylon to protect them from divine judgment.

Read Revelation 16:1–11. What is happening here, and how is it portrayed?

The first four plagues “are not universal, or the inhabitants of the earth would be wholly cut off.”—Ellen G. White, The Great Controversy, p. 628. The first inflicts painful and loathsome sores exclusively on the worshipers of the beast. The second and third plagues affect the sea and the rivers and the springs of water, which turn into blood. Without water to drink, rebellious humanity cannot survive. The fourth plague affects the sun so that it scorches sinners, causing unbearable pain.

The unbearable pain inflicted by the plagues does not soften the hearts of unrighteous humanity so as to change their rebellious attitudes. Instead, they curse and blaspheme God, who executes these plagues. Nor do any of them repent.

In Revelation 16:10, 11 (see also Exod. 10:21–23), we can see that the fifth plague strikes the throne of the beast. It was Satan who delegated the throne to the beast (Rev. 13:2). Now even the seat of Satan’s authority cannot withstand the force of these plagues. As people suffer in pain, they realize the inability of Babylon to protect them. However, they have set their minds against God, and even the terror of the plagues does not change their hearts.

How can we maintain so close a walk with the Lord that, if tragedy strikes, we know enough of God’s love to trust Him even amid suffering?
Drying Up the Euphrates River

Read Revelation 16:12 along with Revelation 17:1 and 15. What does the symbol of the Euphrates stand for? What is the significance of the drying up of the Euphrates in the context of the seven last plagues?

In the Old Testament, the Euphrates was a critical means of support for Israel’s enemies, Assyria and Babylon. The river flowed through Babylon and was important to the city because it nourished crops and provided water for people. Babylon could not survive without the Euphrates.

Revelation 17:1 describes end-time Babylon as sitting upon many waters, perhaps a reference to the Euphrates (see Jer. 51:13). Revelation 17:15 explains that the waters upon which end-time Babylon sits represent the people who support it: the worldwide civil, secular, and political powers behind the system. However, these powers eventually will retract their support.

The scene of the sixth plague reflects the capture of ancient Babylon by Cyrus the Persian (see Daniel 5). According to the ancient historian Herodotus, on the night that King Belshazzar and his officials had a feast, the Persians diverted the Euphrates and entered Babylon along the riverbed, taking the city by surprise.

The symbolic drying up of the Euphrates in Revelation 16:12 results in the collapse of Babylon in the end time. Because the Euphrates in Revelation represents the world’s civil, secular, and political powers giving their support to Babylon, the drying up of the Euphrates symbolizes the withdrawal of their support and their subsequent attack against Babylon, thereby causing its downfall.

As the people of the world witness the upheaval in nature (see Rev. 16:3–9), they turn to Babylon for protection. However, as the fifth plague strikes the seat of Babylon’s authority (Rev. 16:10, 11), they see the futility of seeking help there. Feeling deceived, they turn against Babylon, causing her downfall (see Rev. 17:16). Yet, as we have seen, their hearts remain hard against God and His people. As such, they become fertile soil for the final deception by which Satan will draw the world to unite against God’s people to wipe them off the face of the earth.

In what ways have you learned how risky it is to place your trust in humans and in human institutions?
Satan’s Last Great Deception

Revelation 16:12 tells us that the purpose of the drying up of the Euphrates is to prepare the way for “the kings from the east” (NKJV). In the Old Testament, “the kings from the east” were Cyrus and his forces coming down from the north, then approaching Babylon from the east (Isa. 41:25). Their conquest of Babylon made the return of God’s people to their homeland possible (Isa. 44:27, 28). In the same way, the symbolic drying up of the Euphrates prepares the way for the coming of the kings from the east to provide deliverance to God’s end-time people.

The kings from the east in Revelation 16:12 are Christ and His army of heavenly angels. At His second coming, Jesus will appear with His angelic host, “clothed in fine linen, white and clean” (Rev. 19:14, NKJV), which is the dress of sinless angels (Rev. 15:6). Accompanied by the host of heaven, Christ will, as Revelation 17:14 shows, overcome the satanic forces that oppress His people (compare Matt. 24:30, 31). This final conflict against Christ and His people leading up to the Second Coming is known as the battle of Armageddon.

Read Revelation 16:13, 14. What is the role of the three unclean spirits in the preparation for the battle of Armageddon? How are they a satanic counterfeit of the three angels’ messages in Revelation 14? (See 1 Tim. 4:1.)

Through the final events leading up to the close of probation, every human being will be led to choose on which of the two sides he or she will stand in the battle of Armageddon. As a prelude to this spiritual warfare, John sees three demonic spirits resembling frogs. Satan’s last attempt to deceive involves demonic, lying spirits.

The dragon (paganism and spiritualism), the sea beast (Roman Catholicism), and the false prophet (apostate Protestantism) unite under Satan’s command (see Rev. 13:11, 12). Satan enables the lamb-like beast to perform miraculous signs (see Rev. 13:13–17) that include spiritualistic manifestations. These signs are part of Satan’s end-time deceptive strategy to persuade the world to follow him rather than the true God.

Blinded by their hatred of God and His truth, the leaders of the world readily believe Satan’s lies, which are cloaked in a pleasing religious guise (2 Thess. 2:9–12). Ultimately, they will unite in the final battle leading to the end of this world.
Gathering for the Battle of Armageddon

Read Revelation 16:16. How successful will Satan’s end-time deception be in gathering the people of the world to the battle of Armageddon?

The deceptive demonic miracles will achieve worldwide success. In having spurned Bible teachings, people will believe a lie that will be accompanied by deceptive miracles (see 2 Thess. 2:9–12). They will unite together in purpose, symbolized by their gathering to a “place,” which is in Hebrew called Armageddon, meaning “the mountain of Megiddo.” Megiddo was not a mountain, but a fortress city located in the Valley of Jezreel (or the Plain of Esdraelon) at the foot of the Mount Carmel ridge. It was an important strategic site.

The Plain of Esdraelon was known for many decisive battles in Israel’s history (see Judg. 5:19; Judg. 6:33; 2 Kings 9:27; 2 Kings 23:29, 30). Revelation uses this historical background to depict a final great conflict, called Armageddon, between Christ and the forces of evil. The people of the world are portrayed as a unified army under the leadership of this satanic league.

The “mountain of Megiddo” is an apparent allusion to Mount Carmel that towers above the valley in which the ancient city of Megiddo was located. Mount Carmel was the site of one of the greatest clashes in Israel’s history, between God’s true prophet (Elijah) and the false prophets of Baal (1 Kings 18). This showdown answered the question “Who is the true God?” The fire that came from heaven demonstrated that the Lord was the only true God and the only one to be worshiped. While the spiritual issue of the battle of Armageddon—Will we obey God or man?—is decided before the plagues fall, those who side with the dragon, the beast, and the false prophet (Rev. 16:13), will then be totally controlled by the devil (as Judas was, leading up to Christ’s crucifixion [Luke 22:3]).

Having chosen the losing side, they will be among those who cry for the mountains to hide them (Rev. 6:16; read also 2 Thess. 1:7, 8). Before the plagues fall, however, Revelation 13:13, 14 portrays the earth beast bringing fire down from heaven to deceive the world into thinking that Satan’s counterfeit, which will include false revivals led by another spirit, is the work of God.

Armageddon is not a military battle among nations to be fought somewhere in the Middle East, but a global spiritual contest in which Christ decisively confronts the forces of darkness (see 2 Cor. 10:4). The outcome will be like that at Carmel but on a worldwide scale—with God’s triumph over the forces of darkness.

For many years, people have been looking at political and military turmoil in the Middle East as signs of the end and of Armageddon. Despite many predictions and date-settings, Armageddon, as they have envisioned it, has not come. How can we protect ourselves from making similar mistakes in regard to interpreting these localized events as the fulfillments of Bible prophecy?
Further Thought: “None but those who have fortified the mind with the truths of the Bible will stand through the last great conflict. To every soul will come the searching test: Shall I obey God rather than men? . . . The apostle Paul declared, looking down to the last days: ‘The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine.’ 2 Timothy 4:3. That time has fully come. The multitudes do not want Bible truth, because it interferes with the desires of the sinful, world-loving heart; and Satan supplies the deceptions which they love.

“But God will have a people upon the earth to maintain the Bible, and the Bible only, as the standard of all doctrines and the basis of all reforms. The opinions of learned men, the deductions of science, the creeds or decisions of ecclesiastical councils, as numerous and discordant as are the churches which they represent, the voice of the majority—not one nor all of these should be regarded as evidence for or against any point of religious faith. Before accepting any doctrine or precept, we should demand a plain ‘Thus saith the Lord’ in its support. . . .

“As the crowning act in the great drama of deception, Satan himself will personate Christ. The church has long professed to look to the Saviour’s advent as the consummation of her hopes. Now the great deceiver will make it appear that Christ has come. In different parts of the earth, Satan will manifest himself among men as a majestic being of dazzling brightness, resembling the description of the Son of God given by John in the Revelation. Revelation 1:13–15. The glory that surrounds him is unsurpassed by anything that mortal eyes have yet beheld. The shout of triumph rings out upon the air: ‘Christ has come! Christ has come!’ The people prostrate themselves in adoration before him. . . . In gentle, compassionate tones he presents some of the same gracious, heavenly truths which the Saviour uttered; he heals the diseases of the people, and then, in his assumed character of Christ, he claims to have changed the Sabbath to Sunday, and commands all to hallow the day which he has blessed. He declares that those who persist in keeping holy the seventh day are blaspheming his name by refusing to listen to his angels sent to them with light and truth. This is the strong, almost overmastering delusion.”—Ellen G. White, The Great Controversy, pp. 593–595, 624.

Discussion Questions:

1. Read Jesus’ admonition in Revelation 16:15, inserted into the description of the preparation for the battle of Armageddon. Note the similar wording in Christ’s earlier appeal to the church of Laodicea (Rev. 3:18). How do Christ’s words show the significance of the Laodicean message for God’s people living at the time of the preparation for the final conflict? In what way does this message apply to you personally?

2. White and clean garments in Revelation symbolize the righteousness of Christ (Rev. 3:4, 5; Rev. 19:7–9). Only those who clothe themselves with the robe of Christ’s righteousness will be able to stand firm in the final crisis. How does one make his or her robes white and clean in the blood of the Lamb (Rev. 7:14)?
Moses and Zimbabwe’s Police

By Andrew McChesney, Adventist Mission

The 26-year-old missionary gazed at the group of 50 Zimbabwean police officers. The uniformed men and women had just participated in a colorful parade in downtown Bulawayo, and they were waiting for him to speak.

Emmanuel Msimanga—a Global Mission pioneer assigned to the central business district of Zimbabwe’s second-largest city—began to speak about Moses.

“Even though Moses was in Egypt, he remembered that he was a Hebrew,” he said. “Moses realized, ‘Even though I’m in Egypt, I’m not an Egyptian. I don’t have to follow the ways of the land.’”

Emmanuel looked into earnest faces.

“Some people are amassing unjust gain. Do not follow that,” he said. “Live a righteous life even though we live in a sinful world.”

Emmanuel, a 2017 theology graduate of Solusi University outside Bulawayo, has a unique opportunity to share Christ. As a Global Mission pioneer, he has been seeking ways to reach out to police officers, government workers, and university students who live and work in his district. By simply asking, he received permission to give a 30-minute devotional message at training courses for local and regional officers.

Emmanuel had much more to say about Moses at the training course.

“Moses chose to suffer with the Israelites rather than enjoy the fleeting pleasures of sin for a season,” he said. Turning in his Bible to Hebrews 11:24, 25, he read, “By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh’s daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.”

Police officers thanked Emmanuel afterward. “This is the devotional we need,” said one. “It tells us things that we don’t want to hear but we must hear.”

“It was a word of rebuke and correction,” said another. “God blessed me today.”

Emmanuel invited the officers to enroll in free Voice of Prophecy Bible studies and gave each a book.

No police officers have requested baptism, but Emmanuel is sure that the Holy Spirit is at work. After just two months of his Global Mission pioneer work, five university students in his district were ready for baptism.

As Emmanuel pushes ahead, he is eager to keep preaching righteousness. “Like Moses, we must always stand for the right, even though the tide of the time says we should be corrupt,” he said.
Part I: Overview

Key Text: Revelation 15:4

Study Focus: Revelation 16 describes the seven last plagues (Rev. 15:1) of earth’s history. Included in these plagues is the only mention of the exact title “Armageddon” in the Bible.

Introduction: This section begins with the end-time people of God standing by the sea of glass singing the song of Moses and the Lamb, an allusion to the Exodus (Rev. 15:1–4). Then the seven plagues are introduced with a vision of the heavenly temple emptied because of the glory of God, meaning the heavenly ministry of Christ has ended, the reversal of its original inauguration (Rev. 15:5–8; compare Exod. 40:34, 35). This scene is close-of-probation imagery. Seven angels were then told to pour out bowls of wrath upon the earth one by one (Revelation 16).

Lesson Themes: The lesson and the focus passage introduce the following themes:

I. God’s People Named by Many Names
   Evidence of the text is that such names as remnant, 144,000, and saints all refer to the same end-time group.

II. Why Plagues When No Repentance Will Result?

III. The Symbolic Meaning of the Euphrates River in Revelation 16:12

IV. Two Gospels in Revelation
The three angels (Rev. 14:6–12) and the three frogs (Rev. 16:13, 14) are contrasting symbols of the gospel.

V. Cyrus the Persian and the Second Half of Revelation
   A pagan king foreshadows the Messiah.

VI. The Meaning of Armageddon

Life Application: The “Life Application” section explores how the description of the battle of Armageddon in Revelation promotes spiritual preparation for the end time.
Part II: Commentary

See “Introduction” of part I for a summary of Revelation 15 and 16.

Main Themes of Lesson 11 Elaborated:

I. God’s People Named by Many Names

We saw in the previous lesson of this teachers edition that God’s faithful, end-time ones are called remnant in Revelation 12:17 and 144,000 in Revelation 14:1. The allusion to Joel 2:32 in Revelation 14:1 makes it clear that John sees the two groups as the same. There is further evidence in Revelation that the multiple names for God’s people all refer to the same end-time group rather than multiple end-time groups.

The 144,000 and the great multitude appear to be opposites. As we saw in the teachers edition for lesson 6 (see theme IV) there are two views on this subject. God’s end-time people are called the 144,000 in Revelation 14:1 and “saints” in Revelation 14:12, but the “saints” of all ages, especially those during the period of 1,260 days/years, are described in Revelation 17:6. So God’s end-time people are called by many names in Revelation: 144,000, remnant, and saints (Rev. 14:12). They stand by the sea of glass (Rev. 15:2); they are the ones who keep their garments (Rev. 16:15); and they are the ones who are called the chosen and faithful followers of the Lamb (Rev. 17:14).

II. Why Plagues When No Repentance Will Result?

The deceptions and plagues of the final crisis expose the truth about Satan and those who follow him (2 Thess. 2:10–12). It is not God’s fault that the wicked are unredeemed. Neither the grace of God (Rom. 2:4) nor the plagues of the end time (Rev. 16:9, 11, 21) bring about any repentance. The unredeemed are hardened in the course they have chosen. Thus, even the destruction of the wicked glorifies the character of God in the end (Rev. 15:3, 4). They have made themselves unsafe to save, and, thus, God sadly lets them go (Hos. 11:7, 8). Even after the millennium and a clear perspective on God’s character, nothing in their character has changed (Rev. 20:7–10). The plagues expose their settled unfitness for eternity and vindicate God’s judgment in each case.

III. The Symbolic Meaning of the Euphrates River in Revelation 16:12

What is the meaning of the Euphrates River in Revelation 16:12? We need not remain in doubt when the text itself defines a symbol. Revelation 17:1 introduces an explanation of one of the bowl plagues, one that has something to do with water. It must be referring to the sixth plague, because the woman who sits on the water is called Babylon (Rev. 17:5), and the “many waters” of Babylon describe the Euphrates River (Jer. 51:13). The meaning of the river is defined in Revelation 17:15. The waters of verse 1 represent “peoples and multitudes and nations and languages” (ESV), in other words, the civil and secular powers of the entire world. These powers give their allegiance to Babylon for a short time (Rev. 17:3, 12, 13), creating a worldwide, end-time confederacy in opposition to God and His end-time people.

IV. Two Gospels in Revelation

The three angels of Revelation 14:6–12 together proclaim the final gospel message to the world. What many readers of Revelation have missed is the counterfeit gospel also proclaimed to the world in Revelation 16:13, 14. The dragon, the beast, and the false prophet (the satanic triad of Revelation 13) each produce an unclean spirit like a frog out of their mouths (Rev. 16:13). According to verse 14 these frogs are the “spirits of demons” (NKJV) who go out to the kings of the whole inhabited world to gather them for the battle of Armageddon (see also Rev. 16:16). Demons are evil angels; thus, you have three holy angels working through God’s remnant church presenting the true gospel in chapter 14 and three evil angels presenting a counterfeit gospel in chapters 13 and 16. Both “gospels” go out to the entire world (Rev. 14:6, 16:14). This counterfeit gospel also is described in 2 Thessalonians 2:9–12 and Matthew 24:24–27. Those who do not rely on the words of Scripture will be deceived in the final crisis.

V. Cyrus the Persian and the Second Half of Revelation

In Revelation 16:12, the drying up of the Euphrates, Babylon’s political and military support system (Jer. 50:37, 38; Jer. 51:35, 36), prepares the way for the kings from the east. This brief description recalls how the armies of Cyrus came from the north and east of Babylon. His engineers excavated a depression in the nearby landscape and diverted the flow of the Euphrates River into that depression, allowing Cyrus’s soldiers to march under the river gates into the city. Timing the diversion to take advantage of a feast day inside the city, Cyrus’s soldiers discovered that drunken guards had left open the gates along the riverbank. The soldiers poured into the city, conquering it and killing its ruler, Belshazzar (as described in Daniel 5). In the months and years that followed, Cyrus initiated a process in which the scattered remnant of Israel were encouraged to go back home and rebuild the temple and the city of Jerusalem.
Notice the total sequence once more: In Old Testament times, Cyrus, king of Persia, dried up the literal Euphrates River in order to conquer Babylon and to let Israel go free. This narrative clearly sets the foundation for the last portion of the book of Revelation. In the book of Revelation, the waters of the end-time River Euphrates are dried up to make way for an end-time Cyrus (the “kings from the east”) who conquers end-time Babylon to deliver end-time Israel! The fundamental narrative substructure of the battle of Armageddon is grounded in the Old Testament story of Cyrus and Babylon’s fall.

VI. The Meaning of Armageddon

The word “Armageddon” is really Har-Magedon in the Greek. Revelation 16:16 explains that the word is based on the Hebrew. In Hebrew har means mountain. So the most natural meaning of Armageddon is “Mountain of Megiddo.” The problem is that there is no mountain in the whole world named Megiddo. There are waters of Megiddo (Judg. 5:19), a valley of Megiddo (2 Chron. 35:22), and a city of Megiddo (1 Kings 9:15). Others suggest “mountain of slaughter” (based on Zech. 12:11) or “mount of assembly” (echoing Isa. 14:13, ESV). The Anchor Bible Dictionary concludes that the best explanation of Har-Magedon is to associate it with the mountain that looms over the waters, valley, and city of Megiddo—Mount Carmel. Mount Carmel is the place where Elijah called fire down from heaven to earth to demonstrate who the true God is (Rev. 13:13, 14). In the last days of earth’s history, there will be a showdown between the true God (Revelation 4, 5) and the counterfeit trio (Rev. 16:13, 14); between the three angels (Rev. 14:6–12) and the three frogs. In that final contest, the fire will fall on the wrong altar (Rev. 13:13, 14), but the true God will be vindicated in the end (Rev. 15:3, 4).

Part III: Life Application

1. In the midst of the battle of Armageddon account (Rev. 16:13–16) is a blessing on the one who keeps watch and hangs on to his clothes (Rev. 16:15). In lesson 3, theme V, we saw that this reference is a clear allusion to Revelation 3:18, the warning of Christ to Laodicea. There is, therefore, a clear connection between the Laodicean church and God’s final call to the world in the context of Armageddon. The church that will pass through the final crisis of earth’s history is seriously flawed—but very much the object of Jesus’ solicitude and will overcome at last (Rev. 3:21). This paradox should be a source of both warning and encouragement to God’s people today.

2. In one single verse (Rev. 16:15), John brings together a variety of New Testament appeals in light of the end. Both “I am coming like a thief” (NASB) and “Blessed is the one who stays awake” (NASB) echo statements of Jesus that are further echoed by Paul (Matt. 24:42–44, Luke 12:37–39, 1 Thess. 5:1–6). All three of these texts are about readiness for the coming of Jesus. By echoing these concepts in the middle of the battle of Armageddon, the book of Revelation makes it clear that now is the time to heed the warning so as not to be on the wrong side then. It is our spiritual task to keep watch over our hearts, thoughts, and behavior—and to remain faithful no matter the deception or the coercion we may face. There is a need for both faithful endurance and discernment, fortified with the words of Jesus, of Paul, and of Jesus to Laodicea. When we choose to be faithful today in the midst of various temptations, we are being prepared for even greater battles at the end of time.
