Sabbath Afternoon

Read for This Week’s Study: Isa. 7:14–16, Isa. 7:17–25, Isa. 8:1–10, Isa. 8:11–15, Isa. 8:16–22.

Memory Text: “I will wait on the Lord, who hides His face from the house of Jacob; and I will hope in Him” (Isaiah 8:17, NKJV).

At a burning building in New York City’s Harlem, a blind girl was perched on a fourth-floor window. The firemen had become desperate. They couldn’t fit the ladder truck between the buildings, and they couldn’t get her to jump into a net, which she, of course, couldn’t see.

“Finally her father arrived and shouted through the bull horn that there was a net and that she was to jump on his command. The girl jumped and was so completely relaxed that she did not break a bone or even strain a muscle in the four-story fall. Because she trusted her father completely, when she heard her father’s voice she did what he said was best.”—Edited by Michael P. Green, 1500 Illustrations for Biblical Preaching, p. 135.

In the same way, God provided powerful evidence that He wanted the best for His children, but they rejected the gently flowing way He first presented to them; thus, He had to speak to them with a roar and a flood instead.

Prophecy Fulfilled (Isa. 7:14–16)

In Isaiah 7:14–16, Immanuel is a sign linked to the specific dilemma of Ahaz: before the child Immanuel would be old enough to decide between different kinds of food, “the land before whose two kings you are in dread will be deserted” (Isa. 7:16, NRSV). This refers to the land and kings of Syria and northern Israel (see Isa. 7:1, 2, 4–9) and reiterates God’s promise that their power would soon be extinguished.

Why does Isaiah 7:15 mention “‘curds and honey’” (NRSV) that the boy would have to eat?

The crops and fields of Judah would be destroyed by the Assyrians (Isa. 7:23–25). So, the people, including the Old Testament Immanuel, whoever he was (Isa. 7:14, 15), would be forced to return to the diet of nomads (Isa. 7:21, 22). But while they would be poor, they would have enough on which to survive.

When was the prophecy regarding Syria and northern Israel fulfilled?

(2 Kings 15:29, 30; 2 Kings 16:7–9; 1 Chron. 5:6, 26.)

This prophecy of Isaiah was given about 734 B.C. In response to the bribe of Ahaz, Tiglath-pileser III did what he probably would have done anyway: he smashed the northern coalition, conquered the Galilee and Transjordanian regions of northern Israel, deported some of the population, and turned the territories into Assyrian provinces (734–733 B.C.). The remainder of Israel was saved when Hoshea, after murdering King Pekah, surrendered and paid tribute. In 733 and 732 B.C. Tiglath-pileser conquered Damascus, the capital of Syria. Then he made Syria into Assyrian provinces. So, by 732, within about two years of Isaiah’s prediction, Syria and Israel had been conclusively defeated, and it was all over for the two kings who had threatened Ahaz.

Soon after Shalmaneser V replaced Tiglath-pileser III in 727 B.C., King Hoshea of Israel committed political suicide by rebelling against Assyria. The Assyrians took the capital city of Samaria in 722 B.C. and deported thousands of Israelis to Mesopotamia and Media, where they were absorbed into the local populations eventually and lost their identity (see Isa. 7:8—within 65 years Ephraim would no longer even be a people). God had predicted what would happen to the enemies of Judah, but His point to Ahaz was that this would happen anyway, without any need to rely on Assyria.

Think, if you were living in the northern kingdom while all this was happening, how easy it would be to lose faith. What can we do to learn to keep our faith intact, so that when tomorrow’s calamities come, we can stay firm? (See 1 Pet. 1:13–25.)
Foreseen Consequences (Isa. 7:17–25)

Read the above verses. What is the Lord describing that will happen to the land? Why should we not be surprised at this outcome?

“Invitation upon invitation was sent to erring Israel to return to their allegiance to Jehovah. Tender were the pleadings of the prophets; and as they stood before the people, earnestly exhorting to repentance and reformation, their words bore fruit to the glory of God.”—Ellen G. White, Prophets and Kings, p. 325.

Thus, for Ahaz, the man of fear rather than faith, the good news from God was that Syria and Israel would be wiped out. The bad news was that Assyria, the ally and “friend” he had chosen to help him, would turn out to be a far more dangerous foe than Syria and Israel had been. By turning down God’s freely offered deliverance, Ahaz was guaranteed defeat. If Ahaz thought his world was falling apart now, things were only going to get worse!

“It is better to take refuge in the Lord than to put confidence in princes” (Ps. 118:9, NRSV). How could Ahaz trust that Tiglath-pileser III would be satisfied with taking the countries to the north and would respect Judah? Assyrian writings, such as annals of the Assyrian kings themselves, testify to the fact that their desire for power was insatiable.

Read 2 Kings 16:10–18 and 2 Chronicles 28:20–25. What was happening to Ahaz? What spiritual principle do we see unfolding here? Why should we not be surprised at his actions?

Second Chronicles 28:20–23 powerfully sums up what resulted from Ahaz’s asking for help from Assyria rather than relying on the Lord.

Our natural tendency is to trust in what we can see, feel, taste, touch—the things of the world. Yet, as we know, the things of the world vanish. Look at 2 Corinthians 4:18. What is the text saying to us? How can we apply its message to our own lives? And what difference will it make for us if we do?
What’s in a Name? (Isa. 8:1–10)

Can you imagine playing a ball game with Isaiah’s second boy? By the time you could say “Maher-shalal-hash-baz, throw me the ball!” it would be too late. But even longer than his name is its meaning: “swift is booty, speedy is prey” or “speed the spoil, hasten the plunder.”

The message of the name clearly has to do with rapid conquest, but who conquers whom? (Isa. 8:4.)

Isaiah 8:1–10 reinforces the message of chapter 7. Before a child could reach a certain stage, spoils of war from the capitals of Syria and northern Israel would be taken by Assyria. Furthermore, because Judah had refused God’s message of assurance, represented by the gently flowing waters of the Shiloah stream in Jerusalem, it would be overwhelmed by the mighty power of Assyria, represented by flooding from the great Euphrates River.

Because Ahaz turned to Assyria, the names of Isaiah’s sons referred to Judah, as well as to northern Israel: “swift is booty, speedy is prey,” but “a remnant shall return.” Why was there still hope? Because although Assyria would fill Immanuel’s land (Isa. 8:8), they still had the promise that “God is with us” (Isa. 8:10). Indeed, what we see here is a theme that permeates the entire book of Isaiah, which is that though there would be judgments on God’s enemies in Judah and other nations, delivered in the form of military disasters, suffering, and exile, the Lord would be with the faithful survivors of His people and restore them to their land.

Why does Isaiah tell us he legally recorded the child’s name and had marital relations with his wife (“the prophetess”)? (Isa. 8:1–3.)

The timing of this son was central to his significance as a sign. As with the sign of Immanuel, from the time he was conceived and born to the time Assyria defeated Syria and Israel there would be less time than it would take for the boy to reach an early developmental stage, in this case calling for his father or mother (Isa. 8:4). When Isaiah legally recorded the boy’s name even before his conception, he made the child and his name a public prophecy that could be tested by subsequent events.

Despite repeated mistakes on the part of His professed people, the Lord was still willing to save them. How can we take this principle and apply it to ourselves personally, especially when we fail and fall in our own spiritual life?
Nothing to Fear When We Fear God Himself
(Isa. 8:11–15)

In his first inaugural address, on March 4, 1933, American President Franklin D. Roosevelt told a nation disheartened by the Great Depression, “The only thing we have to fear is fear itself.” Isaiah’s message to depressed people is: we have nothing to fear when we fear God Himself.

God warned Isaiah not to fear what his people feared, but to fear Him (Isa. 8:12, 13). This is an important theme in Scripture. For example, in Revelation 14:6–12, three angels proclaim a worldwide message: fear God and give glory to Him, rather than fearing and giving glory to the earthly beast power described in Revelation 13.

How do you understand the idea of “fearing” God? What does that mean, especially in light of the command for us to love God, as well (Matt. 22:37)?

True fear of God as holy means that you recognize Him as the ultimate power in the universe. Such fear overcomes any other fear. If He is for you, nobody else can touch you without His permission. If He is against you because you have rebelled against Him, you can run, but you can’t hide!

Doesn’t the idea that we should fear God contradict 1 John 4:18? “There is no fear in love, but perfect love casts out fear; for fear has to do with punishment, and whoever fears has not reached perfection in love” (NRSV).

There are different kinds of fear. If someone with awesome power is your friend, with whom you share mutual love, you do not fear that person in the sense you think he or she will hurt you. But you have a kind of fear in the sense that you know and respect the power of that person and the boundaries of your relationship.

As Christians we aren’t to love the things of the world, the things people of the world themselves love (1 John 2:15). Thinking, then, along parallel lines, as Christians, are there things the world fears that we as Christians shouldn’t fear? If so, what are they, and why shouldn’t we fear them? At the same time, what things does the world not fear that we Christians should? (See, for instance, Matt. 10:28; Jer. 10:2, 3.)
Gloom of the Ungrateful Living Dead
(Isa. 8:16–22)

Read the above passage. What is it talking about? What has this to do with King Ahaz? Summarize the ideas.

Ahaz was deeply involved in pagan religion (2 Kings 16:3, 4, 10–15; 2 Chron. 28:2–4, 23–25), which was heavily interconnected with the occult (compare Deut. 32:17, NRSV; “They sacrifice to demons,” 1 Cor. 10:20). Various aspects of modern witchcraft have striking parallels in ancient Near Eastern rituals, as witnessed by ancient writings outside the Bible. Indeed, even many of today’s New Age practices are simply contemporary manifestations of these ancient occult practices.

Isaiah’s description of despair resulting from reliance on spirits other than the Lord (Isa. 8:21, 22) fits Ahaz well (compare 2 Chron. 28:22, 23). Isaiah refers to people becoming enraged and cursing their king (Isa. 8:21). This would warn Ahaz that because he led the people into the occult, they would curse him. In fact, when Ahaz died, an exception was made regarding his burial due to lack of respect for him: “they did not bring him into the tombs of the kings of Israel” (2 Chron. 28:27, NRSV).

What do these texts say about the occult? (Lev. 20:27, Deut. 18:9–14.)

Separation from the occult is a matter of loyalty to God. First Chronicles 10:13, 14 applies this principle to the case of King Saul: “So Saul died for his unfaithfulness; he was unfaithful to the L ORD in that he did not keep the command of the L ORD; moreover, he had consulted a medium, seeking guidance, and did not seek guidance from the L ORD. Therefore the L ORD put him to death and turned the kingdom over to David son of Jesse” (NRSV).

Look around at your own life, at the influences around you. In what subtle ways are you exposed to the principles behind the occult and various manifestations of spiritualism? And even if you can’t totally avoid them, what can you do to minimize their influence upon you, or your family?

“In the days of the Hebrews there was a class of people who claimed, as do the spiritualists of today, to hold communication with the dead. But the ‘familiar spirits,’ as these visitants from other worlds were called, are declared by the Bible to be ‘the spirits of devils.’ (Compare Numbers 25:1–3; Psalm 106:28; 1 Corinthians 10:20; Revelation 16:14.) The work of dealing with familiar spirits was pronounced an abomination to the Lord, and was solemnly forbidden under penalty of death. Leviticus 19:31; [Leviticus] 20:27. The very name of witchcraft is now held in contempt. The claim that men can hold intercourse with evil spirits is regarded as a fable of the Dark Ages. But spiritualism, which numbers its converts by hundreds of thousands, yea, by millions, which has made its way into scientific circles, which has invaded churches, and has found favor in legislative bodies, and even in the courts of kings—this mammoth deception is but a revival, in a new disguise, of the witchcraft condemned and prohibited of old.”—Ellen G. White, The Great Controversy, p. 556.

Discussion Questions:

1. Discuss the issue of spiritualism as it appears in movies, books, TV, and popular culture. If nothing can be done to stop it, how can we alert others to the dangers of what, for so many people, seem like harmless distractions, nothing more? Why is a proper understanding of the state of the dead so important in being protected against these deceptions?

2. Read Isaiah 8:20. Rephrase it in your own words. Let different people in the class read their versions aloud. What is the Lord telling us here?

3. Dwell more on this idea of loving and fearing God at the same time. In what ways does our love stem from that fear? Or does our fear stem from our love? Discuss.

Summary: Through Isaiah’s actions and family, as well as his words, God reinforced the message of warning and hope: the only safe course is to trust that God knows what He is doing. He has both the love and the power to guide, protect, and provide for those who let Him. For those who turn to other powers, there is only gloom.
Timely Lesson

By Godwin K. LeKundayo

God taught me about heaven’s understanding of time when, as a district pastor, I led a three-week evangelistic series in my homeland, Tanzania.

Local organizers chose the dry season for the meetings in Moshi, a city at the foot of Mount Kilimanjaro. But heavy rains started to fall after the first week. Worried that the rain would keep people at home, I suggested that we reschedule the meetings for later.

To my surprise, the chairman of the local evangelistic committee, a layperson, refused.

“No, pastor, we are not going to postpone,” he said. “We have been praying about these meetings, and our Lord heard our prayers and knew the rain would fall.”

“So, what shall we do?” I said. “You can see that it is raining heavily.”

“We have to have a little faith to believe that our God can be sensitive about the time of the meetings,” he said. “Let us pray this way, ‘Our good Lord, You can allow the rains to fall as much as You wish, but let there be no rain from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.’ This way people will have 30 minutes to travel to the 4:00 p.m. meetings and 30 minutes to return home after the meetings end at 6:00 p.m.”

I wasn’t sure about such a request, but I joined in the prayer.

The next morning, the rain fell in torrents. The downpour continued into the afternoon. But exactly at 3:30 p.m., it stopped. Our meeting started at 4:00 p.m., and I preached until 6:00 p.m. The rain started again at 6:30 p.m.

The weather followed this schedule for two weeks. Rain poured down until 3:30 p.m., stopped, and then started again at 6:30 p.m.

One day, a visitor arrived at the meeting site at 3:00 p.m. to get a good seat. He waited for some time and, seeing the heavy downpour, decided that the meeting would be canceled and left. The next day he asked whether we had met.

“Of course,” I replied. “We didn’t ask God to stop the rain at 3:00 p.m. We asked for 3:30 p.m., so you should have been sensitive about that.”

“I’ll never make that mistake again,” the man said.

On the last Sabbath, I baptized 12 people in a river. As I brought the last person out of the water, the rain started to fall.

The experience taught me that God is sensitive to time. While God may not face time constraints as we do, He does expect us to be sensitive to time, too, and to be good stewards of time. Paul tells us in Ephesians 5:15, 16, “See then that you walk circumspectly, not as fools but as wise, redeeming the time” (NKJV).
Study Focus: Isaiah 7 and 8

Part I: Overview

Isaiah 7 and 8 form a unit on the judgment against Judah (including Aram and Israel). The last section of Isaiah 7 (17–23) deals with the enemies of the nation of Judah. Herein we view the tiny living things, the fly and the bee, which are symbols of the foreign nations and also divinely appointed instruments in the future devastation of God’s people. These chapters also testify that God sent many signals to Judah about its imminent judgment; for example, the name of Isaiah’s son. God asks Isaiah to write the name of his son, Maher–Shalal–Hash–Baz, on a scroll before he is born as a clear pronouncement of the coming events. The first part of chapter 8 shows that Aram, Israel, and Judah are going to suffer because of the king of Assyria. Specifically, Judah trusts in the great power of Assyria at that time, instead of God, so the dark ages, likewise, will come to them. This study is divided into three sections, entitled: (1) the enemies are coming; (2) the friend nation comes for Judah; and (3) trust in the holy one.

Part II: Commentary

The Enemies Are Coming

Isaiah 7:17–25 introduces a prophecy against Jerusalem. This scene of judgment is given because of the reluctance of the king of Judah to trust in the liberation coming from the Lord, as the country faces an attack from the Aramean and Israelite armies. God has been speaking through the prophet Isaiah, exhorting the king not to feel afraid of Rezin and Pekah for many reasons. Their plans are not going to come to fruition (Isa. 7:5–7). Rather, their realms are going to be forsaken (Isa. 7:16). However, it seems that the king of Judah is not willing to entrust to the Lord the great challenges that he is facing. It is recorded in 2 Kings 16:7 that “Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglathpileser king of Assyria, saying, I am thy servant and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me.” Thus, the Lord brings judgment upon the kingdom of Judah. The Lord allows Judah to experience a moment that has not happened in years: “The LORD will bring on you, on your people, and on your father’s house such days as have never come since the day that Ephraim separated from Judah” (Isa. 7:17, NASB).

Some nations stalk Judah during this time, among them Aram, Israel (Isa. 7:1), Egypt, and predominately Assyria (Isa. 7:18). The Edomites and the Philistines (2 Chron. 28:17, 18) also converge against Judah.
Unlike Daniel, the prophet Isaiah does not use dreadful beasts to represent the powers that will attack Judah; rather, they are symbolized by the fly and the bee (Isa. 7:18). Those elements are used by other Bible writers for representing the enemies of God’s people (Deut. 1:44, Ps. 118:12). Another vivid description is offered in Isaiah 7:20: “In that day the Lord will shave with a razor, hired from regions beyond the Euphrates [that is, the king of Assyria], the head and the hair of the legs; and it will also remove the beard” (NASB). Oppressors humiliate their prisoners of war by shaving off the hair. The reference to the hair of the head and of the legs may express the totality of the devastation (Willem A. VanGemeren, ed., New International Dictionary of Old Testament Theology and Exegesis [Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan Publishing House, 1997], vol. 1, p. 866). The previous description is amplified to portray complete desolation on the earth: “And it shall come to pass in that day, that every place shall be, where there were a thousand vines at a thousand silverlings, it shall even be for briers and thorns. With arrows and with bows shall men come thither; because all the land shall become briers and thorns” (Isa. 7:23, 24).

The Friend Nation Comes for Judah

Isaiah 8 is an extension of the Isaiah 7 prophecy. The judgment against Judah is referred to here, along with other elements. The announcement starts with the singular Hebrew name mahēr šālāl ḥāš baz that Isaiah’s son receives. Commonly, it has been translated as “swift is the booty, speedy is the prey” (Isa. 8:1, NASB). The child would stand as a warning to the nation (compare with Isa. 8:18) of God’s predictions both for Judah’s enemies at the gate and for Judah herself, Assyria’s next victim (Isa. 8:4, 8; compare with Isa. 7:17).

In relation to Aram and Israel, it is prophesied once again, “For before the child shall have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother, the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away before the king of Assyria” (Isa. 8:4). The following verses give other details concerning those events: “Behold, the Lord is about to bring on them the strong and abundant waters of the Euphrates, even the king of Assyria and all his glory; and it will rise up over all its channels and go over all its banks” (Isa. 8:7, NASB). Following this verse, the prophet points out the next victim of the Assyrian forces: “Then it will sweep on into Judah, it will overflow and pass through, it will reach even to the neck; and the spread of its wings will fill the breadth of your land, O Immanuel” (Isa. 8:8).

Even after those pronouncements, 2 Kings 16 says that the king of Judah still prefers to trust in the Assyrian sovereignty: “So Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, saying, ‘I am your servant and your son; come up and deliver me from the hand of the king of Aram and from the hand of the king of Israel, who are rising up against me’ (2 Kings 16:7, NASB). In order to get Assyria’s support, Ahaz sends a part of the treasuries of his reign (2 Kings 16:8). Thereafter the prophecy is fulfilled. Aram is defeated by the Assyrians (2 Kings 16:9). The fulfillment of the prophecy in relation to Judah is stated in 2 Chronicles 28:20, 21: “So Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria came against him and afflicted him instead of strengthening him. Although Ahaz took a portion out of the house of the LORD and out of the palace of the king and of the princes, and gave it to the king of Assyria, it did not help him” (NASB).

Trust in the Holy One

Second Chronicles furnishes us with certain details that could provide further insights into our study. Isaiah 8 provides a clear prophetic pronouncement in relation to the enemies of Judah at that time. It is a vivid message in the name of Isaiah’s son. Probably, the king (as do many in Judah) thinks that the prophetic pronouncement of the future destruction of Judah would be a part of the “fake news” of the day. It is referred to in Isaiah 8:12: “You are not to say, ‘It is a conspiracy!’ In regard to all that this people call a conspiracy” (NASB). The Bible tells us that the king does not turn back to the Lord: “Now in the time of his distress this same King Ahaz became yet more unfaithful to the Lord” (2 Chron. 28:22, NASB).

The biblical record describes some of his actions: “He sacrificed to the gods of Damascus which had defeated him, and said, ‘Because the gods of the kings of Aram helped them, I will sacrifice to them that they may help me.’ But they became the downfall of him and all Israel. Moreover, when Ahaz gathered together the utensils of the house of God, he cut the utensils of the house of God in pieces; and he closed the doors of the house of the LORD and made altars for himself in every corner of Jerusalem. In every city of Judah he made high places to burn incense to other gods, and provoked the LORD, the God of his fathers, to anger” (2 Chron. 28:23–25, NASB).

In the last part of this section, the Lord exhorts His faithful believers at that time: “You are not to fear what they fear or be in dread of it. It is the LORD of hosts whom you should regard as holy. And He shall be your fear, and He shall be your dread. Then He shall become a sanctuary” (Isa. 8:12–14, NASB). During the time of Ahaz, the sanctuary is profaned, and among other acts, “he closed the doors of the house of the LORD” (2 Chron. 28:23, 24, NASB). So, in this critical moment, the Lord “shall be for a sanctuary,” the center of holiness for some, “but for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence” for others (Isa. 8:14).

In this regard, Ellen G. White comments, “But in Judah there dwelt some who maintained their allegiance to Jehovah, steadfastly refusing to be led into idolatry. It was to these that Isaiah and Micah and their associates looked in hope as they surveyed the ruin wrought during the last years of Ahaz. Their sanctuary was closed, but the faithful ones were assured: ‘God is with us.’ ‘Sanctify the Lord of hosts Himself; and let Him be your fear, and let Him be your dread. And he shall be for a sanctuary.’ Isaiah 8:10, 13, 14.”—Prophets and Kings, p. 330.

Part III: Life Application

1. We learn that King Ahaz prefers to trust in an Assyrian alliance instead of resting on God’s promises. It is easy for human beings to rely on human intervention instead of God’s performance. Why is it sometimes hard for believers to believe in God’s promises in times of crisis? Meditate, as part of your answer, on 2 Chronicles 28:22: “And in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the Lord.”

2. In Isaiah 8, the prophet announces Judah’s destruction. This anticipated news could have been given to the people in order to move them to seek God’s help; the enemy would not have been able to destroy them had they sought God’s protection. They needed to fear the Lord their God more than they feared the king of Assyria. What do you feel when you receive some admonition in life? Discuss the ways in which it has helped you.
3. Second Chronicles 28:19 states, “For the Lord humbled Judah because of Ahaz king of Israel, for he had brought about a lack of restraint in Judah and was very unfaithful to the Lord” (NASB). In what ways can the behavior of one person have the potential to bring devastation to others? What lesson can we learn from Isaiah 8:18: “Behold, I and the children whom the Lord hath given me are for signs and for wonders in Israel from the Lord of hosts”?
